PARMA
CITY OF ART

COMMUNE OF PARMA
Parma city of senses
The origins of the city of Parma are extremely old: evidence of man dating back to the Lower Paleolithic age was discovered in the hills of Traversetolo and in the mountain basin of the Taro river. Numerous terremare recovered in the province - stemming from terra mara or terra marna, mounds of blackish soil, formed by settlements enclosed by a bank and stream - are instead a testimony to the Bronze Age. Founded in 183 a.C. by the Romans, Parma immediately became an important reference point for all of the surrounding plains: the construction of Via Emilia (187 a.C.) promoted a profound and rapid development of agriculture and of ovine breeding in all of the territory. In 569 the city was conquered by the Longobardi and became home to a Duchy. A new system of communication began to override the Roman order and the Parmesan segment of the Francigena way was born. Castles and hospices were quickly springing up to insure that pilgrims and travellers were met with assistance and hospitality. From the 9th century, cloistered centers, predominantly Benedictine, encouraged a reclamation of the territory and allowed for the recolonization and the restoration of agricultural land. The bishops progressively assumed temporal power and Parma provided two antipopes – Honorius II and Clement III – to the conflict between religious and political power on the ordinations. The constitution of the Municipality, around the year 1140, signaled the beginning of the rebirth of the city after a period of Medieval turmoil. Internal conflicts between Papist families (Sanvitale, Rossi, Lupi) and Ghibellines culminated in the battle of 1248 and the defeat of Emperor Federico II. Parma was later conquered by the Viscounts and dominated by the Sforza family (1440-1500), which imposed its rule by means of important noble families: Pallavicino, Rossi, Sanvitale and Da Correggio. From 1500 to 1521 the city was controlled by the French and then by the Church. In 1545 Pope Paul III, wanting to create a buffer state between the state of the Church and the Spanish power in Lombardy gave the Duchy to his illegitimate son PierLuigi Farnese. Thanks to their financial means and power, the Farnese family ruled for two centuries. During this time the city became a great capital, rich in monuments and works of art.

With the extinction of the Farnese family (1731), the Duchy was passed to Carlo of Spain, son of Elisabeth Farnese and Philip V, and following the Peace of Aachen (1748), he was able to add a good portion of the lower regions to his territory. Parma was then passed from Spanish to French control: the reforming politics of this dynasty, supporting the enlightenment culture, allowed the Duchy to resume. After 1759 the decisive action of Prime Minister Guillaume du Tillot imposed a modern state, founded on civil organization and industrial economy.

The Congress of Vienna of 1815 assigned the Duchy to Marie Louise of Austria, the second wife of Napoleon Bonaparte, who governed from 1816 to 1847, starting an absolute state sovereignty comprised completely of non-native ministers. The prestige of the “beloved Duchess” was such that the Duchy was not affected by the first Risorgimento movements. In 1847, with the death of Marie Louise, the Duchy returned to the Bourbon family. The plebiscite of 1860 declared the annexation of the former Duchy of Parma to Piedmont and then into the unified Kingdom of Italy.

With the construction of a unitary state, Parma was greatly affected by the demotion from head of state to a simple capital of a province, and experienced grave social and economic crises. At the beginning of the 1900s Parma saw the diffusion of unions and socialist organizations and strongly opposed the Fascist regime that was spreading throughout Italy. The struggle with Fascism culminated in its most dramatic moment in August 1922, when Italo Balbo attempted to enter the popular neighborhood Oltretorrente. The citizens organized themselves and were able to ward off the soldiers with their famous barricades.

During the Second World War, the enormous damages caused by bombings and numerous battles prompted the formation of a zone controlled by partisans until the liberation on 25 April 1945, especially in the valleys of the Taro and the Ceno rivers. The reconstruction and the economic development after the war helped Parma regain its original splendor. The city started to prove itself in the food industry and resumed its position in the cultural and artistic world, also thanks to the relaunching of its heritage and traditions.

Parma has been home to the European Food Safety Authority (EFSA) since 2003.
CATHEDRAL
Built between 1060 and 1073, it is one of the finest examples of Romanesque architecture in Italy. The bell tower, topped by a gilt copper angel, was added between 1284 and 1294. The dome, boasting a depiction of the Assumption of the Virgin, was frescoed by Correggio. The relief of the Deposition by Benedetto Antelami adorns the right transept.

BAPTISTERY
This octagonal baptistery made of Verona marble was built by Benedetto Antelami and started in 1196. It is certainly the most outstanding example of the transition from Romanesque to Gothic art in Italy. The interior, a sixteen-sided polygon, houses the notable sculptures by Benedetto Antelami depicting the Months, the Seasons and the Signs of Zodiac, dating back to the first and second decade of the 13th century.

DIOCESAN MUSEUM
With the help of explanatory panels, reconstructed images, epigraph models and significant archeological finds, starting with the Roman city and pagan cults, the visitor’s tour winds throughout the building exemplifying the Episcopal complex development between the Paleochristian era and Medieval times. The Museum also houses the original statues of the Baptistery’s exteriors, mosaics recovered in Piazza Duomo and 11th century pieces from the Cathedral and the Baptistery.

CHURCH OF SAN GIOVANNI EVANGELISTA
With a Baroque-style façade and bell tower, the building was constructed between 1498 and 1510. The inside, in the shape of a Latin cross, has three nave columns. The broad dome was frescoed by Correggio between 1520 and 1521. Parmigianino frescoed some of the arches of the inside-chapels.
OLD PHARMACY OF SAN GIOVANNI MONASTERY
The historic Pharmacy, which can be found within the walls of the Monastery of San Giovanni, was probably opened in 1201. It consists of three rooms, each of which contains furnishings from the 16th and 17th centuries. A large collection of tall, cylindrical vases, including apothecary flasks, jugs and mortars for the preparation of remedies, is displayed on ancient wooden shelves.

CHURCH OF SANTA MARIA DELLA STECCATA
The most splendid Renaissance church in the city, it was built in 1521 in order to house an image of the Madonna, said to be miraculous. In the style of Bramante, it has the shape of a Greek cross. The most elaborate work in the church is the frescoed arch above the presbytery, painted by Parmigianino. A door on the left leads to the sacristy and the burial chapel housing the tombs of the Farnese and Bourbon dukes of Parma. The Constantinian Museum is also accessible from inside the church.

NATIONAL GALLERY
Started by Philip and Ferdinand of Bourbon, and subsequently enriched by acquisitions made by Marie Louise of Austria, the collection contains works from the 13th to the 19th century. Among the most noticeable works are the Head of a Young Girl attributed to Leonardo da Vinci, the portrait of Erasmus of Rotterdam by Hans Holbein the Younger, the Madonna of the bowl and Madonna of Saint Jerome by Correggio, the Turkish Slave by Parmigianino and the statue of Marie Louise by Antonio Canova.

FARNESE THEATRE
The Farnese theatre, one of the most beautiful historical theatres in Italy, was built between 1618 and 1619 for Ranuccio I. The theatre was opened in 1628 for the wedding of Margherita de’ Medici and Odoardo Farnese. The stage was equipped with an innovative system of movable scenery and galleries, the first example of such stage machinery in the history of Italian theatre.
SAN PAOLO’S CHAMBER
Only two rooms from the ancient Benedictine Monastery, reconstructed at the end of the 1400’s, are open to the public today. One of the rooms was frescoed by Alessandro Araldi in 1514, and the other, the Room of the Abbess Giovanna, or San Paolo’s Room, by Correggio in 1519. The frescoes painted by Correggio are considered to be true masterpieces of Italian High Renaissance art.

NATIONAL ARCHAEOLOGICAL MUSEUM
Situated inside the Pilotta Palace, the museum was founded in 1760 by Don Philip of Bourbon in order to preserve the discoveries from an excavation in Velleja, a small town near Piacenza. Today it houses one of the major centers for Paleontological research. The collections, spread on two floors, contain finds from Velleja, a section of pre- and protohistory and one dedicated to Parma and the surrounding areas during the Roman period.

PALATINA LIBRARY
The historical Palatina Library was founded in 1761 by Philip of Bourbon and opened to the public in 1769. Its collection expanded thanks to numerous donations and purchases, including the De Rossi Oriental Fund, the private libraries of the Dukes of Bourbon-Parma, and the Ortalli collection of prints. Today the library owns over 700,000 volumes, including incunabula, manuscripts, prints and illuminated manuscripts dating from 16th to 17th centuries.

BODONI MUSEUM
Dedicated to the typographer Giambattista Bodoni, who invented new typographical characters and worked as head of the Parma Royal Printing Works starting in 1768, the museum contains original tools and equipment such as punches, presses, perforating dyes, original matrixes, and boxes of the alphabet, still used today for printing precious works.
STUARD GALLERY
This art gallery houses the most important private collection in the city, more than 270 paintings from the 14th to the 19th century, left to the Congregation of San Filippo Neri in 1834 by the will of Giuseppe Stuard. On display are examples of Tuscan art from the 14th and 15th centuries, paintings from the Emilian school of the 17th century, and a representation of a hound by Parmigianino.

PUPPET CASTLE
The Giordano Ferrari museum or Castle of puppets is the most important collection in Italy dedicated to animation theatre. Marionettes and puppets, heads, stage objects, pictures and posters, are just a part of a wider collection including wooden actors, set designs, scripts, books about theatre and volumes from the 1700s and 1800s centuries collected by the Ferrari Family, the most celebrated family of puppeteers in Parma.

HOUSE OF MUSIC
An international reference point for musical research and documentation, the House of Music plays host to the main music institutions of the city, such as the Historical Archive of the Regio Theatre, the International Research Center on Music Periodicals and the Musicology Department of the University of Parma. Facilities also include a Concert Hall with a Steinway piano reserved for concerts and presentations, an Auditorium for educational purposes, as well as a music and multimedia library.

HOUSE OF SOUND
The museum displays a rich collection of communication devices and sound players, from phonographs to mp3 gathered by don Giovanni Patanè, who collected more than 400 items including a wide range of crystal sets, vintage, professional, military and standard radios.
BIRTHPLACE AND MUSEUM OF ARTURO TOSCANINI
Turned into museum in 1967, the modest house on the west side of the river where Arturo Toscanini was born in 1867 now displays a collection of relics and records gathered by the maestro, retracing his travels and successful career. The Aureliano Pertile collection gives evidence of the close relation between Toscanini and the famous tenor.

GLAUCO LOMBARDI MUSEUM
This museum houses a rich artistic and historical documentation of the Duchy of Parma from the second half of the 18th century to the unification of Italy. Particular attention is given to the reign of Marie Louise of Austria, with furniture and relics that belonged to the Duchess. The museum also contains watercolors, engravings, and paintings from the 1800s, French paintings from the 1700s, and the Petitot collection and archive.

REGIO THEATRE
Commissioned by Marie Louise of Austria and designed by Nicola Bettoli, the theatre was constructed between 1821 and 1829. The neoclassical façade has a portico with ten Ionic columns, a double row of windows and decorations by Tommaso Bandini on both sides of the tympanum representing the allegories of Fame and the Lyre. Also worth noting are the vault and the curtains, painted by Giovan Battista Borghesi. The Regio Theatre is still one of the most renowned Opera Houses in the world.

NICCOLÒ PAGANINI AUDITORIUM
A former sugar factory, this building was converted into a concert hall by the famous architect Renzo Piano. It was named after Niccolò Paganini, considered one of the best violinist of all time, connecting the past to the future. It is an innovative example of the restoration of industrial archaeology. The Auditorium houses 780 seats, foyer, coatroom, bar, service rooms and offices. A sophisticated sound-system guarantees optimum functionality.
DUCAL PARK
Originally designed in 1561, the park was transformed and extended in 1749 by Alexandre Ennemond Petitot with a French theme evident in his more recent restorative works. The garden, adorned with groups of sculptures by Jean Baptiste Boudard, houses the Palazzetto Eucherio Sanvitale and the Ducal Palace.

DUCAL PALACE
The Ducal Palace, which nowadays houses the Carabinieri offices, was designed by Vignola for Ottavio Farnese in the 16th century.
In the course of the 1700s the building was modified and enlarged by Petitot who added four corner pavilions.
Inside, one can see the frescoes of J. Bertoja, a room frescoed by Agostino Carracci and stucco decoration by Luca Reti.

PALAZZETTO EUCHERIO SAN VITALE
The Palazzetto Eucherio San Vitale, built in 1520, is a remarkable example of Renaissance architecture. It is an H shaped building, with four corner towers connected by loggias and windows decorated with sandstone candlesticks. It is attributed to Giorgio da Erba for the structure and to Gianfrancesco D’Agrate for the stone decoration. Inside, recent restoration work has revealed fragments of 16th century frescoes by Parma school artists, depicting landscapes and still-lifes.

NATURAL HISTORY MUSEUM
The museum, established in 1764 by J.B. Fourcault, was headed in the past by renowned zoologists such as Pellegrino Strobel and Angelo Andres. Preserving an interesting natural history collection, the museum plays host to the Vittorio Bottego Zoological Collection, with over 600 specimens from Eritrea, including madrepore coral from the Gulf of Massawa, and to the Emilio Piola collection from the Democratic Republic of Congo.
BOTANICAL GARDEN
The Botanical Garden, created in 1768 for scientific purposes by G.B. Guatteri, was later directed by famous scientists who transformed it into an experimental, ecological landscape garden. Based on a design by Petitot, but finished only in the year 1793, it now boasts centuries old trees and exotic plants in greenhouses and to wonderful examples of botanical species, including the Ginkgo biloba.

AMEDEO BOCCHI MUSEUM
Dedicated to the Parma painter Amedeo Bocchi, the museum, founded in 1999, presents three main subjects: the portraits of his daughter Bianca, studies and drawings for the frescoes decorating the council lounge of Parma’s Cassa di Risparmio bank, and several grand designs executed in preparation for paintings and frescoes, completed in Rome throughout different stages of his life.

CHINESE ART MUSEUM
The museum, whose collection was started at the end of 19th century by Guido Maria Conforti, Bishop of Parma, is subdivided into the Chinese Art Museum and International Ethnographic Sections. The first hosts a collection of ceramics, bronze items, paintings and everyday objects, from Neolithic Era to today. The second contains materials originating from various countries and brought back by missionaries.

THE OLD HOSPITAL
Lining a stretch of Via D’Azeglio with its long, arcaded façade, the Old hospital of Misericordia was founded in 1201. Today the hospital houses the State Archives, the Civic Library, the Bizzozzero Library, specializing in agricultural texts, the Municipal Historical Archives, the Oratory of Sant’Ilario and the Lino Ventura Film Center.
CHURCH OF SANTA CROCE
The Church of Santa Croce, with Romanesque origins, was built in the early decades of the 12th century. It was altered in 1415 and radically transformed in the 17th century even though in 20th century an attempt was made to restore its Romanesque appearance. Traces of the original building can still be seen in the capitals of the pillars of the three naves, which bear distinctly medieval subjects.

CHURCH OF SANTA MARIA DEL QUARTIERE
The church of Santa Maria del Quartiere was so-named because it was erected close to the neighborhood of a military garrison. Its hexagonal plan with rectangular chapels was designed in 17th century by G.B. Aleotti and later modified by G.B. Magnani. A majestic dome frescoed by P.A. Bernabei between 1626 and 1629 is supported by arches and pillars.

CHURCH OF SAN VITALE
In the form of a Latin cross, the church has only one nave ending in a large presbytery surmounted by a dome in the style of Vignola. The ten chapels are divided by pillars by the architect Cristoforo Rangoni. The elegant façade by sculptor Felice Pascetti boasts six statues attributed to Pietro Sbravati while in the interior, the urn under the main altar preserves St. Vitale’s body, brought in 1648 from Rome. Also worth noting are the Baroque stuccowork furnishings, the only examples in Parma and in the Emilia region.

CHURCH OF SS. ANNUNZIATA
The church, designed by Giovanni Battista Fornovo, has an elliptical body expanding in ten radial chapels with buttresses at regular intervals. In the grandiose interior, the central area is separated from the choir by a triumphal arch with stucco trimmings. Among the paintings, particularly noteworthy is the large altar piece in the apse, a Madonna with Child and Saints painted in 1518 by Francesco Zaganelli.

THE PARMESAN GASTRONOMY

PARMA, ALWAYS SYNONYMOUS WITH GREAT FOOD, WITH ITS GASTRONOMICAL VOCATION, BOASTS SECULAR TRADITIONS THAT OVER THE YEARS HAVE DEVELOPED INTO A MODERN FOOD INDUSTRY. THE LEADING ROLE IN THIS GASTRONOMICAL PRODUCTION GOES WITHOUT A DOUBT TO THE PIG-BASED PRODUCTS, CLOSELY FOLLOWED BY CHEESES, WINES, AND VARIOUS FOREST PRODUCTS.

Parmesan gastronomy includes a variety of typical delicacies, among which its cheeses and meats stand out. Among the cheeses, the most renowned is without a doubt Parmigiano-Reggiano: a hard cheese, made from partly skimmed milk, which has a long aging process (18-24 months) and it is sold in the shape of a wheel weighing around 24-43 kg.

The production zone for this cheese is comprised of a vast territory that extends between the provinces of Parma, Reggio Emilia and Modena. There are various qualities of salami products throughout the Parma province: Prosciutto Crudo (cured ham) of Langhirano, Culatello of Zibello, Spalla Cotta (a type of cooked ham) of San Secondo, Polesine Parmense and Colorno, Coppa from the hills, Fiocchetto and Salame of Parma, Felino and Langhirano.

Among the typical first courses we find:
• cappelletti or anolini, beef-filled pasta rounds, cooked in meat stock, served for occasions such as Christmas, New Year’s day and Easter;

CULATELLO

In order to savour Culatello, first the rope and the grey buildup from the salting process must be removed, then the meat must be washed, dried, and then wrapped in a white-wine soaked canvas for several days. At this point the meat is ready to be cut into thin slices, accompanied by homemade bread and slivers of butter.
Among the second courses, dominated mostly by meats, a few deserve particular attention:
• pot roast (beef or horse), slow-cooked in a meat broth of optimum quality;
• Parmesan-style tripe, meat with a long and slow cooking process, generously topped with Parmigiano cheese;
• Duchess of Parma, meat filled with Parmigiano cheese and prosciutto crudo (cured ham);
• various boiled meats with sauces;
• vécia (horse meat hash), a type of pepper, tomato, and onion stew with potatoes and a bit of minced horse meat;
• pesto di cavallo, horse meat seasoned and topped with oil, garlic, and slivers of Parmigiano cheese.

Among the characteristic freshwater DID YOU KNOW…?

“Prosciutto” comes from the Latin prae exuctus, which means drained. In the 14th century the people from Parma began to use salt from nearby Salsomaggiore which, thanks to the presence of sodium, bromine and sulfur, prevented the growth of bacteria, allowing the meat to keep longer.
products of the plain and hillside areas of Parma, we find lake sturgeon, trout, eel and frog.
The specialty of the mountain area is Porcini mushrooms, fried, steamed or used as a topping for pasta, tortelli or polenta.
Black truffle indigenous to Fragno, also comes from the hill-region.
The pastry shops offer cakes of rice, chocolate and almonds, ring-shaped cakes and puddings, but the most celebrated sweets are the Scarpette di Sant’Ilario (little shoe-shaped pieces of pastry topped with icing or sprinkles prepared for January 13th, the day celebrating the patron saint of the city) and candied Parma violets (iced candies that resemble small wild violets).
Wines typical of the zone include: the red Colli di Parma, the white Malvasia and Sauvignon, typical of the hillside area and Lambrusco and Fortana, red wines from the plain-areas.

To end a meal there is a wide assortment of locally-produced liquors:
• Bargnolino (made from wild blackthorn fruits)
• Sburlone (a quince liquor)
• Liquor of Marie Louise (made from lemon verbena)
• Nocino (made from unripened walnuts collected on the eve of St. John’s Day).

TORTELLI D’ERBETTA

Filling: 6 hg soft ricotta cheese, 3 hg spinach or Swiss Chard, 1 egg, 3 hg Parmigiano cheese, nutmeg, salt
Pasta: 1 kg flour, 4 eggs, water

Boil the spinach, drain, then sauté with a little butter and mince. After letting it cool, mix with the other ingredients. Arrange the mixture on strips of pasta, fold the strips over and press the edges down to cover and enclose the filling. Trim the tortelli on three sides using a pronged ravioli cutter or a paring knife and cook them in boiling water. Once cooked, arrange on a hot plate and cover with melted butter and freshly grated Parmigiano cheese.
The history and traditions of Parma are well-expressed in the tastes and flavours of the extraordinary food products that its people, over time, have been able to create. The Food Museums, born in the last few years in the province, recount their history, protecting their secrets.

Museum of Parmigiano Reggiano: hosted in the old dairy farm belonging to Prince Meli Lupi, recently restored, it displays a collection of tools for cheese processing from the second half of the 19th century to the first part of 1900s. Other sections are dedicated to the aging process, the commercialization of the cheese, the gastronomic importance of the product and the history of Parmigiano-Reggiano. At the end of the tour there is an area for tasting and purchasing the famous delicacy.

Museum of Prosciutto: located in the former cattle market of Langhirano, built in 1928, the museum covers an area of more than 500 square metres and it is divided into several sections illustrating the history, techniques and recipes from the origin of Parma ham to today.

Museum of Salame: dedicated to the most renowned salami in Italy and found inside the Felino Castle, this museum displays the tools of pork butchers, showing how this delicious uncooked meat is preserved by curing, air dried and seasoned.

Tomato Museum: this museum is found today in an old food processing industry situated on the bank of the Taro River, halfway between Fornovo and Ponteraro. It hosts a collection of memories of people and machines, plants, packaging of the products, graphic and commercial images.

Parma is located in northern Italy, in the Emilia-Romagna region, halfway between Bologna and Milan. It is an ideal position to reach other tourist attractions such as Venice, Ferrara, Verona, Turin as well as Cinque Terre, Portovenere and Portofino in Liguria and resorts along the coast of Romagna such as Rimini, Riccione and Cervia.

Situated along MOTORWAY A1 MILAN-BOLOGNA and along A15 PARMA-LA SPEZIA, Parma has two motorway exits:

1. exit “Parma Ovest”, next to the link-up of A1 and A15, about 10 Kms from town, direction Milan;

2. exit “Parma” from A1.

Once you get out of the motorway, you can park your car in the exchange parking Nord and reach the city centre by bus: line 2 and 13.

PARMA RAILWAY STATION is linked to the main Italian towns and to the most important European cities. Most of the trains travelling on the Milan-Bologna line stop in Parma at least once a hour while those following the lines Turin-Bologna and Genoa-Bologna are quite frequent, as well as trains bound to the coast of Liguria and Romagna.
Rome and Florence have a direct link thanks to intercity and eurostar trains.

From Giuseppe Verdi Airport, only 5 kms away from the heart of the town, the historical centre can be easily reached by taxi or by bus n. 6. Flights to Rome take off daily from Parma and during the week it is possible to go to London, Catania, Palermo and Tirana thanks to the companies Alitalia, Ryanair, Windjet and Belleair.
Once in the city, getting around is quite easy. Parma has excellent public transportation for both intercity and out-of-city travel. TEP, the local transportation authority, guarantees service both day and night extending to and covering the entire territory with its different lines.

There are also dedicated services that respond to a variety of needs:
• Shuttle buses have specific destinations such as the Fairs, the University campus and exchange parkings.
• Prontobus or the phone-in bus, running also in some municipalities of the province, allowing access to public transportation during hours when it is not normally running.

All one needs is to make a simple telephone call (Toll free number: 800977900) to arrange a time and the closest bus stop. All tickets can be purchased on the bus.

In Parma, it is possible to move around quite comfortably with a bicycle, thanks to the numerous bike paths and rental spots: Parma Punto Bici, on Viale Toschi n. 2, Parma City Bike, on Viale Mentana, 8/a and Sun Bike on Viale Rustici, 12/e.

Punto Bici, next to Toschi parking lot, rents electric bikes, traditional bikes for adults and children, and tandem bikes for one or more days. Parma City Bike and Sun Bike rent and repair traditional bikes only.
For those who prefer to get around by car, there are some limitations. Access to the historic city center is restricted from 7:30am to 8:30pm to residents and commercial activities that have appropriate permits.

Parking lots in the city are marked by blue lines: appropriate paying spaces marked by a blue sign. Those who do not comply to the parking regulations are subject to a variable fine.

It is possible to make the payment using the parking meters along these areas or in order to stay longer, by getting the appropriate prepaid tickets.

These tickets are available at the Infomobility offices: Viale Mentana, 29/a; c/o Duc and Largo Torello de Strada, 11. According to the zone, parking may be unrestricted or blocked-in. For cars with a foreign license plate, parking in the blue lines is free.

The most practical solution to get to the historical center by car is to leave it in one of the several car parks in the center:

- Parcheggio Toschi - Viale Toschi, 2/g. Tel. 0521235953
- Duc Parking - Viale Fratti, 11 Tel. 0521030562
- Dus Parking - Viale Mentana, 99/a Tel. 0521706301 (Infomobility)
- Goito - Via Goito Tel. 0521235953
- Central Parking Repubblica - Largo Paul Harris Tel. 0521235953
